A person who influenced me the most

Many people around me has credited ~~to~~ me with variety of knowledge and ideas. Each of these people has influenced me in different ways with pieces of advice and great examples. If I were to try to ~~say~~ weigh each of those influences against each other and say which of them was truly the greatest influence in my life, it would be my father.

Not just as a father but also as a friend, a mentor he has taught me amazing things. He is kind of a man who thinks of others before him, even if that leaves him with nothing. Selflessness, respect, gratitude, uniqueness and many other quality values is something he has taught me. His hardships and suffering has always taught me great life lesson. Hearing other people say great things about him has always made me a proud son. I still remember the time when I was 10 years old and lost in a competition for which I have been preparing for years. My father had greater hopes for me which made me think that I had lost everything. But when I dully lying in my room he knocked in and said, "Hey champ! It's okay to fail," and he left. That one sentence has changed my life forever. Having his advices and guidelines has helped me be the person I am today. Even if I show my gratitude everyday ~~for~~ to him for everything he has done, will still feel less.
